DANIELSON AND PUTNAM NEWS

DANIELSON

The candidacy of Attorney Elbert L. Danielson for nomination by the republicans of Killingly for representative was announced Thursday. Attorney Danielson has been a prominent figure in his party for a number of years and has finally decided to become a candidate.

He is a native of Danielson and has spent his life here studying in Killingly's schools before devoting his attention to the study and practice of law. He is chairman of the republican town committee, town counsel, borough counsel and has served as town tax collector and a member of the court of burgesses. Fraternally, Attorney Danielson is identified with the Elks lodge, Warren chapter and Montgomery council, Danielson's Masonic bodies; with the various Scottish Rite bodies with headquarters in Norwich and is a member of the Elks Temple, Mystic Shrine, at Hartford; a member of Sedgwick post, Sons of Veterans of Norwich; of Quinebaug lodge of Odd Fellows and Unity Encampment of Danielson and Putnam lodges.

With a larger last day crowd than has been on the grounds for the close of the Brooklyn fair for many years, the annual exhibition of the Windham County Agricultural society goes down into history with some new records established. The attendance Wednesday was in excess of 8,000. Secretary M. J. Frink said Thursday afternoon, and actual money receipts at the gates were several hundred dollars in excess of any figure ever reached before in the long history of the organization. The unexpectedly large attendance on Thursday—large for a last day of the fair—gave a further financial boost to this year's show, which also brought forth more money by several hundred dollars from concessions than ever was received in any other year in recent memory.

That the fair officers were highly pleased with the record patronage and general success of the exhibition goes without saying, and leaves them in an enthusiastic mood for clearing up the details of the recent fair and starting plans for next year's.

As is always the case, many who were at the fair on Wednesday returned on Thursday again to enjoy its features. With them came many who always enjoy seeing the fair when it is in session, and a crush as on the first big day. Racing events featured Thursday's exhibition, but all the attractions received a great deal of attention.

Exhibitors of various machinery and mechanical equipment for making work lighter and life more attractive on the farm found business good and got in touch with many prospects that will prove profitable later.

The fair association will realize a generous profit from this year's exhibition and may be able, with the reduced costs in prospect, of making desired improvements for the coming year. For years past there has been an insistent demand from patrons of the fair for an enlarged grandstand. It is believed that the increased number of admissions from those who would like to see the show seated while watching the races and the vaudeville would not only pay the interest in the investment that would have to be made in making the grandstand larger, but also pay for the cost of construction within a few years.

Good weather this year contributed materially to bring out a record attendance and it seems likely that new records for attendance will be made in the immediate future. The fair at Brooklyn is now one of only two held in the entire country. The grounds are easily accessible from nearly every direction and next year, with the William-Hampden-Brookline state road, they will be even more accessible.

Heavier attendance may be looked for from towns to the west.

Dance at the Bijou, Jewett City, to night. Danz orchestra—adv.

A Hartford paper has a featured article on one thing that many of the small towns of Connecticut are not going to do at the coming election, that they were in the habit of voting concerning themselves with in years gone by—voting on the license question, and Killingly is one of the towns mentioned in the article as having taken a vote on license last fall, just for general results, even though war-time prohibition was in force and the chances slim for ever getting a license again. Killingly is also mentioned.

PUTNAM

Trial of the case of Jennie M. Willis vs. N. A. Ballard and M. J. Kinney was not resumed in the superior court Thursday morning because of the illness of Attorney Charles E. Searles, one of the counsel in the case. Mr. Searles was in the court room pluckily determined to go on with the trial, but at ten o'clock it was deemed advisable to postpone further consideration of the matter until further notice.

Witnesses, members of the jury and others interested in the case were present that the case may not come up again until sometime in October or possibly November. This is because other cases are assigned for trial and will get first consideration.

Mr. Searles is suffering on Thursday from the return of an old and troublesome difficulty, but he was not considered as at all seriously ill and will very likely be ready to go on with his court work within a week.

Putnam is to receive a visitation from Everett J. Lake, republican nominee for governor, it was announced here Thursday. Mr. Lake will be a guest next Wednesday evening at the banquet and opening meeting of the season of the Putnam Men's Club at the Congregational church. Members of the club were very pleased over Mr. Lake's coming and the indications are that they will turn out en masse to meet him.

The solid manner in which delegations from Putnam and neighboring towns are aligning themselves behind the candidacy of Byron D. Bugbee of this city who has come out for the republican nomination for congressman in the Second district is indicated by the following letter sent out Thursday by Putnam:

To the delegates of the Second Congressional District:

We wish to present for your serious consideration as our candidate for congressman from the Second district, Mr. Byron D. Bugbee of Putnam. Mr. Bugbee has been a successful business man in Putnam for many years and a member of the Connecticut legislature in 1899 and a member of the Constitutional convention, and is able to represent this district in Washington. It is our belief that in solving the many problems which this country has to face we need the counsel and advice of good sound business men. We earnestly ask your support of Mr. Bugbee.

Putnam—Silas M. Wheelock, Charles P. Dean, Irving H. Miron, Joseph P. Dean.

Plainfield—Arthur E. Mott, A. A. Chase, M. D. F. H. Tillinghast, Samuel L. King, Pomfret—John F. Ash, W. W. Averill, F. H. Palmer, T. S. Clapp.

Killingly—William E. Labelle, Arnold P. Rich, Thomas J. Ayward, N. Lorne Greig.

Thompson—George E. Whitney, Fred L. Bonin, William N. Bates.

Mr. Bugbee was born in Millbury, Mass. March 21, 1874. He studied in the schools of Webster and during vacation periods followed his business bent by taking employment in dry goods stores, where other youths were spending their time idling. Mr. Bugbee's ancestors are described as of old New England stock, reaching back to the days of the Pilgrims. Some of his early ancestors were residents of Muddy Brook, now known as East Woodstock.

His father's name was Alonzo A. Bugbee and his mother was Aseneth Bates, of a family of prominence here in the scholastic and Connecticut. Having completed his studies Mr. Bugbee in 1879 entered a dry goods store in Turner's Falls, Mass., where he remained five years and then moved to Holyoke and remained there to two years in the same line of business.

In 1886 Mr. Bugbee entered the employ of H. C. Murray, then operating a dry goods store in Willimantic and who shortly afterwards opened a branch store in Putnam. Mr. Bugbee being admitted as a partner. Soon afterwards Mr. Bugbee purchased Mr. Murray's interest in the Putnam store and created a ally built up one of the most successful business houses in this section of eastern Connecticut, retiring only recently, the business now being conducted under the firm name of Bugbee and Wolf. Mr. Bugbee's son, Ralph X., being a member of the firm.

High praise is being given in the press to the Connecticut exhibit at the Eastern States exposition at Springfield, Mass. The exhibit is in a corner of the machinery building and was arranged by Leonard H. Healey of North Woodstock, secretary of the state board of agriculture. The Connecticut exhibition booth is done in blue and white and there is little white that gives it a semi-colonial effect. The most striking feature
